Sustainable Farming in Family Environment

Under the auspices of Sustiram, the Social Extension Wing of the Department of Economics, decided to initiate the Sustainable Farming in Family Environment in association with the Institute of Labour and Management on 9/7/2019. Parents and students who were interested in farming were the beneficiaries of the program. The Inaugural programme began with the address by the former Head of the Department Prof Ganga Devi who highlighted the need for adopting an 'alternate' course respecting the unwritten rules and regulations of the environment. To achieve this cherished objective, she advocated for empowering the households with the support from Civil Society.

Dr. B. Vijayakumar, Director of Institute of Labour and Management (ILM) highlighted the deplorable condition of agriculture in Kerala. He is of the view that the over dependence on neighbouring States is not only eroding our financial position but also the health of the population. The neighbouring States are using all the 'dirty tricks' to enhance productivity. He advocated for agricultural empowerment through strengthening of homestead farms. This can be achieved only when the 'Generation Z' takes an active part in agriculture and allied activities. He urged the Department to form local level teams based on the students domicile and to empower them to be the 'change makers'. D.V. Cyril is of the view that Sustainability is one of the important issues faced by agriculture sector in Kerala. This can be attributed to cost escalation and shortage of labour. He opined that Keralites should shift from perennial crops to homestead farming where the emphasis is on 'horticulture'. Jacob Joy also supported that view that the need of the hour is to achieve a transition towards horticulture and to tap the immense potential to tap the growing demand for organic products. Dr. Krishna Kumar is of the view that a right balance between horticulture and other allied agriculture occupations like poultry, animal husbandry will in the long run make this shift a 'profitable and sustainable one'
