UNIVERSITY OF LAGOS

DEPARTMENT OF PHYSICS

Dr. A. O Akala B. Tech (Akure), M. Sc, Ph. D (Lagos)
(Communication & Navigation Scientist)

Date: 25th January 2022

Collaboration between Dr. Andrew Akala of the Department of Physics, University of Lagos, and Dr. Simi K.G. of the Department of Physics, Mahatma Gandhi College, Trivandrum, Kerala, India on the State of the Equatorial/Low-latitude Ionosphere during Solar Cycle 24

1.0 Background

Under my academic leadership, we designed a Space Research Campaign encompassing different research projects covering some topical areas in space in space physics to foster research collaboration between my Research Group and Dr. Simi K.G. of the Department of Physics, Mahatma Gandhi College, Trivandrum, Kerala, India.

The Research Campaign proffered an understanding of the state of the equatorial/low-latitude ionosphere during solar cycle 24 to the Aeronomy Community. The complex coupling processes from the Sun to the Earth, particularly the impacts of such (Solar-Magnetospheric-Ionospheric-Atmospheric) couplings on the Earth's atmosphere/ionosphere over the African and Indian sectors were brought to the fore, and their impacts on man-made systems were carefully elucidated. Where necessary, members may solicit assistance from their colleagues but this must be approved by the team.

1.2 Publications

The study period was from September 2020– September 2022. Five peered reviewed articles came out of the collaboration. The articles are:
